Be this as it do not facilitate its labors, will at least, I hope, enlighten the commission as to some things which. I apprehend, look a little strange to scientists and gentlemen of experience and observation. The gentlemen of the commission, had they been in Memph's one year since, would have heard, as they did yesterday at the Penbody, such remarks as—

"We cannot afford to have another yellow-fever epidemie; it would ruin our city forever." I was sorry to see this statement to the commission applanded; but so it was, and so it was last year. Another thing that has likely as oaished not only the gentlemen of the commission applanded; but so it was, and so it was last year. Another thing that has likely as oaished not only the gentlemen of the commission, and it seems to me that the provy-yaults being settled, the pavements or pure river water ought to be next. As the cost of these will be utterly beyond the ability of the people to meet and live, it will be necessary to have some outside aid, and without going from our own State, I believe she can constitutionally, and will with alacrify, remit or apply such revenues due or to come due from us as will emable us in time to do all that the commisthoroughly sewered at once, we were utterly lost, and that the yellow-fever would take entire possession; that our trade was now being taken away on this account, and the claim values in her borders, more than repay the west up by it that we are second only to bounty, and in the meantime, the people is New Orleans as a cotton mart, or any other other counties will not live in the daily tear mart, and that Memphis is no more filthy of sporads. I am, gentlemen of the commisthan any other southern city. The former sion, very respectfully, C. W. FRAZER, November 25, 1879. assertions and statements were so constantly kept before the public that the impression A Complaint that Should be Investiwas finally made (on strangers) that Mem phis was in a flat, with a singlish bayon, full of floating fifth, while every inch of soil was thoroughly salurated with it, and that its citizens were public beggars, without shame or manhood. Other remarks made (it seems to the public in reference to a difficulty that occurred near my business place yesterday to make a statement to the public in reference, in which I conceive that I have been excellent tested. or manhood. Other remarks made (it seems by authority) to the commission perhaps no httle astonished it, which were: "What this body shall propose the people of Memphis will accept blindly," and "this body should say what we are to do, then we will do it."

Now, with all due respect to the gentlemen composing the commission and the author of the sewarks as made. I must say that I and the concern with the policemen, and simply asked to concert with the policemen, and simply asked to so quartity with the filters and to go quartity with the filters and to go quartity with the filters and to go quartity with the filters and the second of the the remarks so made, I must say that I, and a great many other 'good and lawful citizens," are not willing to blindly accept the recommendations of gentlemen who modestly (and I believe honestly) lay no claim to infullibility, and who as continued and scient. lity, and who as gentlemen and scient- avoid trouble with the officer, I immediately fallibility, and who as gentlemen and scientists are bound to admit (as some of them have) that certainly so far as the yellow-fever is concurred, any plan they may suggest or that may be adopted as to drainage or the bayou will simply be an experiment, and as to that I will say, that while the cotton merchant of Memphis may be amply able to "do it," the average owner of real estate is neither able or willing to carry out any plan which would entail an additional tax of more than — per cent. per annum, and they would, if possible, prefer to know that that was not to be absorbed by a ring. Real estate owners family or entreates of my friends, I was ed by a ring. Under these circumstances, it seems to me that the owners of real estate are more vitally interested than the cotton factor, and we hope he has rights which the commission will consider in their suggestions. His houses and lots can be seen and assessed, and by mistortune, miscule and theft he has been ground to powder; and while the immense cotton to powder; and while the immense cotton to powder; and while the immense cotton trade of Memphis has already filled the pockets of the merchant, it has brought no balm of Gilead to his wounds. These things are true; and the commission will, in any suggestions they may make, consider the condition of the people, and remember that the charter of Memphis was taken and her name bandied repudiator, because she was as a repudiator, because she was not able to pay fifty cents on the dollar of her debts. No one can depy the cause nor the fact; and yet gentlemen will persist in saying that we can "do it." If God had not made Memphia she would long since have been destroyed by her friends, for they elieve what they say at the time, but they know not "what they do."
